PART FIRST.

Bombay:

THE ALBERT PRINTING WORKS, MILITARY SQUARE, FORT.

1888.

Tamen quanta fuerit has per terras, populosque artis pictoriae perfectio, superstites eorum numi palam eloquuntur.

ECKHEL. Prol. Gen. Doct. Num. Vet., Vol. I. p. 139.

La Numismatique est patiente, et elle amasse les faits spéciaux qui la concernent, jusqu'à ce que l' histoire vienne plus tard en donner la véritable clef, si jamais elle le peut.

SAINT HILAIRE, Journal des Savants., 1865, p. 413.

Noble est la mission des numismates, et leur rôle est aussi grand que modeste, à ces soldats sans solde, volontaires de l'archéologie, sentinelles perdues du savoir.....Les collections faites dans un but d'étude sont les vrais écrins des savants;..... elles semblent, au point où la critique historique est arrivée aujourd'hui, le seul moyen d' agrandir le domaine de la science.

VTE. DE PONTON D'AMÉCOURT, Annuaire de la Soc. Fran. de Numismat. et d'Archéol., 1866, pp. 305-6.

1092	12.4	·5	no date,	nor mint	El-Rády, a very small coin with the name of the Khalif

I may now pause here, I think, for a while in this rather fatiguing inventory of coins, and correct two or three errors which have unfortunately escaped me while revising the proof. At page 22, opposite the No. 463, the mint-town is printed Mardân, which should be Mâ'dan, quite a new mint in the numismatic series of the Eastern Khalifs, but well known as such in the time of the Seljûkîs, occupying the site of the old Ctesiphon. Another error consists in the mutilated initials in the reference column, at the same page, opposite the No. 466, as J. B. B. R. A., which should be read as Journal of the Bombay Branch of the Royal Asiatic Society, where this coin has been described by my friend Dr. Oliver Codrington, Vol. XVI. (1883-1885) page 98. At page 14, opposite the No, 254, the reference is B. M. C. No. 355, instead of No. 235; and I may have thus overlooked other such mistakes in pages replete with figures, and when reading the proof amidst repeated interruptions.

Having now come to the close of the gold and silver series of the Oriental Khalifate, one may like to 'take stock,' to use a commercial phrase, and viewing the tout ensemble to know how this collection stands both in its totality and variety of specimens in relation to the other great collections of the same series in the world. Here follows a synoptic table of the silver and gold coins of the three splendid national cabinets hitherto catalogued and published,—that of the Bibliothèque Nationale of Paris, excluding the coins of the Bysantine type and the Latin legends, not in any other list, that of the British Museum, and lastly that of the late Rogers Bey, now in the Egyptian Museum. They are as follows :—

	Gold	Silver	Total
Bibliothèque Nationale.....	186	1020	1206
British Museum.....	214	518	732
Rogers Bey Collection	273	471	744
The Present Collection	375	717	1092

It is evident from the above summary that the present collection, although a private one, occupies a respectable position in the ranks of the great Oriental collections of the world. It is next to the French cabinet, whose catalogue was published the last year. The British Museum collection must have received further additions since its publication in 1875, and the present collection will have also a few more added to it in the supplement to be followed hereafter. To say anything more, after the convincing eloquence of figures, in praise of my collection would be unbecoming on my part.

It points out to Bombay, however, as a place worthy of occupying a distinguished place among the principal centres of the world even in the matter of numismatic wealth. Although a comparatively modern town, it can still enable one with a fair amount of industry and diligence, by its geographical position and commercial relations with all parts of Asia and Europe, to collect many precious monuments of antiquity, thus saving them from that vandalism and profaneness with which impious ignorance generally threatens every relic of ancient times not possessing actual utility or not serving for immediate use, and thus compete favourably with the more ancient cities of London, Paris and Cairo.

It will be noticed that there are here a large number of coins marked inedited. This word must indeed be taken with a certain restriction. They are inedited as far as they are not mentioned in the works accessible to me, although I presume that I have consulted nearly every work published on the subject, with one exception, that of Tiesenhausen's Monnaies des Khalifes Orientaux, which I have not yet been able to procure, although from the specimens marked inedited both by Stanley L.-Pool and by Lavoix, in the London and Paris collections, who had access to that work, it seems that it is not an exhaustive treatise on the subject. Then there are such older works as Castiglioni, Marsden, De Fraehn and others, which I have consulted with pleasure, but obtained no more information than that furnished by the above mentioned catalogues. The Marsden collection is included in that of the British Museum, and the dînârs of Colonel S. Guthrie are described in the Journal of the Royal Asiatic Society before mentioned.

The description-column is in this brief catalogue the most tedious as it is the most unsatisfactory part of the work. To save repetition I have avoided the description of the coin whenever it has been described elsewhere, confining myself to give the No. of the coin in the reference column. But there are several specimens which are in general type similar to the coins referred to in the works quoted in that column, but still they have a point, a letter, a sign, or a name and many other peculiarities which render them dissimilar. These I have not all marked as inedited, but, after giving the reference, pointed out the slight difference in the descriptive part of the work, reserving a full description of the inedited designs and legends to a separate memoir. To do more than this would change the character of the catalogue it bears. Every coin has been first referred to the British Museum Catalogue; in the want of a reference there to the Rogers Bey Catalogue, and lastly to that of the Bibliothèque Nationale, being the latest of all; and when well assured of their silence, the coin has been marked inedited.

The weigth and measurement of each coin has very kindly been taken by my friend Mr. F. W. Peterson, Deputy Assay Master in H. M.'s Mint, Bombay. This part at least of the work has been done with an exactitude that defies all criticism from the competence and high attainments of that gentleman, to whom I beg to record here my deep obligation.

With regard to the designations of the two dynasties of the Khalifs, I have adopted the names consacrated by long usage and familiar to every student of history, although they may not meet with the approval of either the purist or the pedantic Arabist.

A great difficulty I have had to contend with from the first was the absence of Arabic characters and signs. It would have been easier to mark these differences with those characters, but they have been avoided throughout the work from the commencement for reasons which I hope to explain more at length in the preface, at the conclusion of the catalogue of all the other series of coins in my cabinet.

The list of the copper coins of this series in this collection is a short one, but there are among them some of great rarity, and in a fine state of preservation. They are as follows :—

THE ALBERT PRINTING WORKS, MILITARY SQUARE, FORT.

Les monnaies mohammédanes sont plus anciennes que tous les manuscrits arabes, que les siècles passés nous ont transmis.....

Les mérites des coins orientaux consistent encore en ce qu'ils constituent le corpus delicti de tant de guerres internes et extérieures, de tant de misères et d'autres conséquences, qui en découlent, comme les anneaux d'une chaîne non interrompue.....

Les deniers de l'Orient, aux yeux d'un homme impartial, ont infiniment plus grand prix que ceux des Grecs, des Romains, et du temps du Christianisme, de toutes les autres nations, en ce qu'ils rendent un service plus grand à l'histoire, comme une source testimoniale des événements.....

La numismatica, come ogni altra disciplina appartenente alla storia, tornerebbe opera di oziosa curiosità se non bastasse ad altro che a raccogliere ed appurar fatti, e non cercasse i legami di quelli col movimento della società nella quale si producono.

The Mohammedan coins enumerated in this part second of the catalogue embrace a period of more than a thousand years, from the beginning of the third century of Hegira to the present. It contains 1875 coins in gold, silver and copper. Many of these coins are of the greatest rarity, some apparently unique, and all in a fine state of preservation, which has always been an essential condition for their admittance into the cabinet, their genuineness being of course incontestable.

These coins are the most authentic, as they are the most precious, documents for the history of a period pregnant with the deepest interest for the historian and the philosopher. They are the veritable monuments of the reigns of various Mohammedan princes and governors who issued coins in their names at different times and places during the Khalifate of Bhagdád. And these are followed by others struck after the abolition of the Khalifate. The almost perfect gold coinage of the Ilkhánians, for instance, whose emission is subsequent to the extinction of the Khalifate, is one of the many interesting features of this collection, and is hitherto the only one known.

Most of the coins catalogued here are described in seven volumes of Oriental coins in the British Museum, published from 1876 to 1883.

I have to thank again my friend Mr. F. W. Peterson, Deputy Assay Master in H. M.'s Mint, Bombay, who has been kind enough to ascertain with care and precision the weight and diameter of every coin in the second and following parts of the catalogue, as he had done in the first.

PART THIRD.

Bombay:

THE ALBERT PRINTING WORKS, MILITARY SQUARE, FORT.

1889.

Oriental money, of larger range and more individuality than European, is worthy of more attention than it has received. The great branch of Mohammedan coinage is invaluable for a period of history when written records are often wanting or little to be trusted. Its decorative art has a charm in the finest work of the Shahs of Persia and the Indian Emperors, but rarely is it more than a delicate rendering of an ornamental writing.

Bombay:

THE ALBERT PRINTING WORKS, MILITARY SQUARE, FORT.

Les médailles, par leurs dates à peu près certaines et par leurs légendes, offrent des répertoires chronologiques de l'art chez tous les peuples, elles devaient être aux Galeries de l'histoire du travail ce que le titre est au livre. .....

En esthétique comme en économie, la richesse n'est pas autre chose que l'accumulation du travail des siècles ; les hommes passent, les œuvres restent, et les génies éteints se survivent dans les admirables modèles qui servent de flambeaux aux jeunes générations. Vouloir faire de l'art sans faire de l'archéologie serait aussi insensé que de chercher la fortune en gaspillant son patrimoine. Si l'artiste, nouvel Argonaute, aspire à la conquête de la plus magnifique toison d'or, qu'il n'oublie jamais que la science doit être son seul port d'embarquement, et que dans le vrai seulement il parviendra à réaliser le beau.

SILVER AND COPPER COINS OF INDIA

The coins, medals and tokens in gold, silver, alloyed nickel, copper, lead, tutenag, and even in porcelain, enumerated and described very briefly in this part fourth of the catalogue, amount to above five thousand specimens, some unique, most of them rare, and nearly all in a fine state of preservation. They represent all ages and all regions of the civilised world, from the infancy of the art of coinage to the present. From the rudimentary incuse and punch-marked areas, passing through various stages of development, these coins and medals reach at last the highest type of perfection, while in same cases, after having attained to a certain degree of beauty and excellence, they degenerate and retrograde to become mere caricatures of their prototypes. They form thus an uninterrupted series of historical monuments of the greatest interest, illustrative alike of the morphology of coins, and of the progress or decay of civilisation. They constitute, moreover, both chronologically and geographically, an epitome in metallic documents of an imperishable kind of the records of all distinct historical zones of the globe with its vicissitudes and revolutions, with its fitful rejoicings and long agony.

This collection represents, besides, not only my labour for years, but also that of two eminent collectors, both deceased, the Hon. James Gibbs, a member of the Viceroy's Council and Dr. Bhau Dhaji, an antiquary of renown. These gentlemen had been enabled by their high position in society, with the aid of others, and of great opportunities, to make their collections with very great care and judgement as to the quality and variety of the specimens. Their cabinets, having been bought en bloc by me, after weeding them of the duplicates and examples of an inferior description, have been embodied in my collection. It is worth noting that these distinguished numismatists had begun to collect coins long before I was born, and, having been fortunate enough to absorb their gleanings into my stores, the total of my collection should now represent, with the method and the plan d'ensemble adopted in it, an assiduous labour of more than half a century, not to speak of the large capital invested in it.

Besides these two cabinets, I have occasionally added by purchase some other minor collections of various series, made during the last fifteen years from time to time. It is no vain praise then to confess that it would, indeed, be very hard now for any public body or private individual to collect such an amount of ancient and rare coins of great value and beauty again in the way I have been able to do within so short a period; for the opportunities are daily getting scarcer, and the chances fewer. No great or good collections can be made in a hurry ; not unlike the fortune and the fame they are of slow growth—la fortune et la gloire durables n'arrivent que lentement. In this part of the catalogue, unlike the former three parts, some coins in silver and in copper, when belonging to one series, although every specimen bears a distinct type, have for the sake of brevity been placed together, and their numbers joined in brackets.

In the part fifth of the catalogue, to be followed hereafter, I hope to describe the splendid and unique suite of the gold medals of a religious character, called Râmatankas, some of them weighing as much as four tolás each, or about 720 troy grains, the gold huns or pagodas, fanams, and some other coins of the dynasties of Southern India, whose only revelation to their former existence and greatness is confined entirely to coins and to lapidary or copper-plate inscriptions ; such are the coins of the Kadámbas, the Cholas, the Chálukyas, the Yádavas and many others. To this will be added the description of a separate series of unique and very rare inedited specimens of the Greek, Roman and Muhammadan gold, silver and copper coinage, which I have reserved for a special memoir.
